

As of Friday, December 19, 2014.

Health Canada Fee Increases Implemented

Health Canada, the agency overseeing Canada's medical device market, has increased its fees by two percent for medical device license reviews as well as Medical Device Establishment Licenses (MDEL) effective April 1, 2012.

Class II medical device license application review fees have increased from $350 to $357.

Class III medical device license application review fees have increased as follows:

- License application: from $5,050 to $5,151
- License application for near patient IVD device: from $8,600 to $8,772
- License amendment application for significant manufacturing change: from $1,270 to $1,296
- License amendment application for significant change affecting device classification: from $4,730 to $4,825

Class IV medical device license application review fees have also increased:

- License application: from $11,750 to $11,985
- License application for device containing human/animal tissue: from $10,960 to $11,180
- License application for near patient IVD device: from $20,030 to $20,431
- License amendment application for significant manufacturing change: from $1,270 to $1,296
- License amendment application for significant change affecting device classification: from $5,390 to $5,498

Finally, Health Canada has increased its Medical Device Establishment License (MDEL) fees from $7,200 to $7,344; renewal fees are now $337 per year.